Half

Believe not all that you see nor half what you hear
Correspondence is half a presence
A disease known is half cured
A fair face is half a fortune
A fault confessed is half redressed
The first blow is half the battle
Half a loaf is better than no bread
Half the truth is often a great lie
Half the world knows not how the other half lives
Six of one and half a dozen of the other
Well begun is half done
Believe nothing of what you hear and only half of what you see
Two boys are half a boy and three boys are no boy at all
The half is better than the whole
One half of the world does not know how the other half lives
Half the truth is often a whole lie
He that has an ill name is half hanged
